Department of Surgery

Dear Colleague,

Audiotape and abstract cards

I am writing to tell you about a wonderfully efficient way for you to keep abreast of all that's new and vital in surgery. With the aid of a panel of experts, timesaving monthly audiotapes and a set of abstract cards for quick reading, you can be briefed on the current key journal articles in surgery each and every month.

With PRACTICAL REVIEWS IN SURGERY
vital information is yours in a quick and timesaving format.
Each month you can listen to 15-20 concise digests of the most significant current journal articles on an audiocassette tape...

while driving to the hospital, on break or during any convenient time.

Experienced clinicians review more than 20 of the most important surgery and related clinical journals for you each month. They select and digest the most vital clinical articles...the really key articles that you can put to work in your practice right away.

Your journal coverage is expanded... Your reading is better focused... You gain authoritative perspective... AND YOU SAVE TIME.

Desktop reference file

In addition, you also have a unique system for information recall. Each article is summarized on a 3X5 printed abstract card for filing by subject in a color-tabbed divider set...giving you an ever-expanding desktop reference to the best of the journal articles...easily accessible and always ready when you need it!

With PRACTICAL REVIEWS IN SURGERY
You can be BETTER INFORMED, SAVE TIME AND MONEY...and EARN CATEGORY 1 AMA CREDITS...

I believe PRACTICAL REVIEWS IN SURGERY will give you the kind of current practical information and advice you need to apply in your daily practice and professional career, and...it will definitely help you manage the information overload that we all face.

Functional ability profiles serve to define a person's physical, mental or emotional health in a way that it can easily be related to issuing regular or limited driver licenses. This table shows in general the principle requirements for each level and may be used as rough guide only. A full narrative description and table for each category are found in Functional Ability in Driving: Guidelines for Physicians, which is available at the Office of Driver Licenses Services.

Profile categories (See Guidelines for additional sub-groups and details)

Profile Levels a-b	A Diabetes & Metabolic Disorders	B Cardio-vascular Disorders	C Pulmonary Disorders	D Neurologic Disorders	E Epilepsy Episodic Dis-orders, etc.	F Learning Memory, etc.	G Psychiatric Illness	H Alcohol & Other Drug Problems	I Visual Disorders	J Anatomic - Chronic Debility	K Functional Motor Impairment	V Vehicle Operating History
1	No history of past or present impairment.

a - Level should be followed by suffix if indicated: C = Visual Correction. P = Provisional (may be modified by driving test performance). CPD = Compensating Personal Device used. CSA = Compensating Standard Accessory used. CNA = Compensating Non-standard Accessory used. For example, a person who has a visual acuity of 20/40 with glasses would have a category I level of 5-C. a person needing hand controls might be given a category K level of 4-P-CNA, which might be changed to 5-CNA by a driving examiner, based upon actual performance in driving.

b - For other considerations, see appropriate section of Functional Ability in Driving: Guidelines for Physicians.

Chrysler Corp. offers interest-free loans to spur car, truck sales

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (Reuters) — Chrysler Corp. escalated the car industry's cut-rate auto financing wars this week by offering interest-free loans on its cars and trucks.

The zero-percent financing is the most drastic program yet offered by a U.S. automaker in an attempt to spur sagging sales.

The interest-free loans are based on repayment schedules of up to 24 months and will be given for 1988 and 1989 U.S. car and truck models. Chrysler said the sales incentive program has no expiration date.

The company is also offering rates of 5.9 percent to 10.9 percent on longer term loans, Chrysler said.

Last week, Ford Motor Co. launched the latest salvo in the incentive wars by offering 2.9 percent short-term loans and expanding its other incentives. General Motors Corp. matched that program on Friday.

Chrysler, which is also offering cash incentive programs ranging from $300 to $2,000 per vehicle, said it has increased the incentives offered on a number of car and truck models.

Bennett Bidwell, chairman of the Chrysler Motors Unit, said the automaker does not plan to reduce its second-quarter production schedules and thinks that business will pick up due to the program.

Several weeks ago, Chrysler had announced a program featuring 4.9 percent loans that at the time was its most extensive program since the late 1970s.

Bidwell said that program was created because the company saw that sales were softening.

U.S. auto sales are down about 8 percent so far this year and truck sales are off by about 2 percent.

Chrysler said the cost of the new round of incentive programs will have a slight negative impact on second-quarter results.

But Bidwell said the automaker's profit margins will still be large enough to offset the cost of the incentive program.

"It's not going to help us. But the only alternative was production cutbacks," Bidwell told a news conference. "It will nick us in the second quarter." He declined to estimate how much the program will hurt Chrysler's results.

LINCOLN'S MOTHER, NANCY HANKS

ver sixty-six thousand copies. Has delivered 6,125 lectures y 55 times, 14 times in Canada, twice to Mexico, nd once to Panama

Our speaker of the day, N. C. Hanks, Washington, D. C., gave us an interesting half hour's talk on "The United States and Her Business Men." Mr. Hanks, who has made himself a poet, author and lecturer through the cultivation of memory and the art of oratory, unfolded the story of his remarkable career. Deprived of both hands and with sight of both eyes destroyed by an explosion in a mine when scarcely twenty years old, Mr. Hanks (a relative of Abraham Lincoln) gave a talk that revealed the most sterling type of optimism that we have ever seen. He stated that since his deprivation he was enabled through his faculty of memory and the kindly assistance of fellow-students to take courses in several colleges, including Leland Stanford and Harvard.

"The greatest day of celebration in this world is that which we have worked for sincerely," Mr. Hanks said. Mr. Hanks chose the hardship of obtaining an education after he had lost both eyes and hands, so that he might have a means of livelihood that would prevent the necessity of his becoming a street-corner beggar with a tin-cup. His efforts were remarkably successful.

The address last Thursday had a salutary effect on our members, who sat with rapt attention, each thinking within himself, "With such a man as an example, why should I complain?" Mr. Hanks was, as President Doty said, "the most incurable optimist that he had ever chanced to meet."

SPECIAL ADDRESSES:

Diamonds in the Rough, United States and her Business Men, The Beginning of all Education, Real Religion in the World and Great Literature, Human Qualities which Cannot be Bought or Sold, Great Men Face to Face, Teachers' Associations and Institutes, Rotary, Kiwanis and Men's Clubs, Student who Wins.

Chapter Nine

The Black Hawk War: A Prophesy Fulfilled

In 1843 while still at Nauvoo, Joseph had been given a Patriarchal Blessing by Hyrum Smith in which he was promised that he would have a large family which would be an honor to his name, and that in time he would be the means of restoring peace between the Mormons and the Indians. At first Hyrum's words were a mystery to Joseph, for he and his wife Eunice had no children and she remained barren throughout their lives. But now that he was settled comfortably at Heber City, Hyrum's promise had been fulfilled at least in part, for Joseph now had 5 wives and 17 children. The remainder of Hyrum Smith's promise would be fulfilled sooner than Joseph could expect.

Ever since the hard times spent at Winter Quarters and the long journey across the plains to Utah, Joseph had become more acquainted and experienced with the Indians, and had developed a rapport with them equaled by few of his brethren. At Winter Quarters, he bartered for oxen with them when it seemed no one else could make a trade. He was allowed to go free after being captured by the Indians and in turn treated his Lamanite brothers fairly during the trip west. Even during the Indian wars at Utah Valley, he had been spared from killing them, and in turn his life had been spared. And at Carson Valley, they sought him out for counsel and allowed him to travel alone through the mountains where others were being murdered. It was as if he was being trained for a greater mission later on.

Wherever Joseph lived, all of his Indian brothers admired the way that his wife Pernetta was treated as an equal with his other wives, and they saw how Pick was educated as well as any of his sons. They also knew that Pernetta's children were given every opportunity his other children were given. They found his word to be true in all matters and were always welcome at his home or at any of the sheep and cattle camps his sons operated in the mountains.

As early as 1851, Brigham Young had advocated reserving a large tract of land in the Uinta Basin for the Indians. By 1864 all of the Ute Tribes were being gathered together to be settled in that eastern part of the territory. In 1856 a treaty was made with the Utes, giving them essentially the same Uinta Basin lands that Brigham Young had envisioned for them more than a decade

HAWS, WILLIAM WALLACE (son of Gilberth and Hannah Whitcomb). Born Feb. 18, 1835, in Wayne county, Ill. Married Barbara Mills. Was baptized into the church by Apostle Erastus Snow in Salt Lake City, November 1848. He located at Provo in the spring of 1849, helped to build the first old Fort on Provo river, and was put on military duty when a boy 14 years old. He served in the fight with the Indians when Joseph Higbee was killed; was made captain of a company of infantry which was sent into Echo Canyon to meet Johnston's army in 1857; helped to build the fortifications and was commissioned a major. He was a member of the Provo police force for 20 years. He was priest, teacher, elder, seventy and on his 59th birthday (Feb. 18, 1894) was ordained a high priest by Elder John Henry Smith; missionary to Illinois 1871. Pioneer settler to Mogollon mountain district, Arizona, 1879; to Gila Valley in 1882; and to Casas Grandes, Mex., 1885; moved to Colonia Dublan, Colonia, Juarez, and finally Colonia Pacheco, being among the early settlers in the Corrales basin. He has a large family of 20 children and 38 grandchildren—and a multitude of friends. 926

AFTER losing hands and eyes at the age of twenty-one, Mr. Hanks studied under the direction of Byron W. King for seven years. Mr. Hanks has memorized over forty thousand words from classical literature, attended one year at King's School of Oratory, Pittsburgh, Pa., four years at Leland Stanford University, two years at Harvard, and a summer session at Columbia. He has earned the ten thousand dollars necessary for his education.

The American Magazine, New York Evening Post, Chicago Papers, San Francisco Papers, Los Angeles Examiner, Honolulu Papers, Panama Canal Zone News, Miami Papers, and many other publications have written favorably of Mr. Hanks and his work.

Harvard University — Department of Social Ethics

Mr. N. C. Hanks recently lectured to my classes in social ethics at Harvard College and at Radcliffe College. I am confident that to many of the students he brought a new idea—that his terrible misfortune has been met in a spirit that makes it better for him and for all who know him than if it had never happened. Good out of evil speaks in Mr. Hanks because he talks of what he knows and proves what he says by his life. Any class in school or college will be better and the wiser for having seen and heard him. Personally I have been happy to have him in my classes both as a student and as a teacher. I have learned from him and I hope to see him again.—Richard C. Cabot.

Ferris Institute, Big Rapids, Michigan

Some years ago I saw a sketch of N. C. Hanks in the American Magazine. I immediately secured the privilege of publishing five thousand copies of the little sketch. I have read this sketch to my school many times. After reading it, I decided I would like to see the man, Hanks. He has lectured at the Ferris Institute on fourteen different occasions. I admire Mr. Hanks to such a degree, I love him to such a degree, that I gave the high schools of Michigan a chance to hear him in commencement addresses for the season of 1922. He is one of America's finest illustrations of the real meaning of sane optimism. He has a message for every audience and he can give the message in a most effective manner. Any oration from Mr. Hanks is sufficient to awaken the dead. I take great pleasure in recommending Mr. Hanks as an entertainer, as a lecturer, as an all-round loyal American.

Very cordially,

W. N. Ferris, Pres. Ferris Institute, Ex-Gov. of Michigan and United States Senator
